

A black and white photograph of a hillside in Los Angeles, California. The hillside is densely covered with trees and shrubs. Several houses are visible, built into the slope. Some houses are multi-story, and one prominent house on the left has a large, light-colored facade. The houses are arranged in a way that follows the contours of the hill. In the foreground, there is a road and a parking area with several cars. The overall scene depicts a typical suburban or residential development in a hilly area.
